GWINNETT COUNTY, SUGARLOAF CID PARTNER ON TRANSPORTATION STUDIES

(Lawrenceville, Ga., Dec. 21, 2016) – The Gwinnett County Board of Commissioners on Tuesday agreed to partner with the Sugarloaf Community Improvement District for various transportation studies within the limits of the CID.

This agreement will allow the CID to develop conceptual plans and cost estimates for various transportation projects along the main thoroughfares that roughly border the CID: Sugarloaf Parkway, Old Peachtree Road, Satellite Boulevard and Meadow Church Road. The CID will also review projects located within these boundaries.

“We are excited to work with Gwinnett County to explore transportation options,” said Alyssa Davis, the recently appointed CID director. “It is a great way to start off the New Year and the efforts of the new CID.”

The County will contribute a maximum of $100,000 in SPLOST funding toward the study costs that are related to roads, streets and bridges. The CID will be responsible for the balance.

The Sugarloaf CID, the county’s sixth, centers on the area around the Infinite Energy Center. The formation of the Sugarloaf CID was approved by the Board of Commissioners in May 2016.
