PROTECTING OUR RESOURCES

Stormwater utility fee pays for maintenance

Since 2006, the Stormwater Utility has helped fund numerous projects that proactively maintain and protect our water resources.

One such example is a project completed last November off Bruce Way/White Oak Circle and Hickory Ridge Drive in Lilburn. For more than 50 years, a 66-inch metal pipe lay beneath Hickory Ridge Road, draining stormwater to a nearby stream. The 100-foot-long pipe was corroded and emptied into a nearby streambed at an unfavorable angle, resulting in massive erosion of the streambed and posing a structural risk to a nearby home.

In late August, crews replaced the existing pipe with a 72-inch reinforced concrete pipe and corrected the erosion problem. This project, funded by the Stormwater Utility fee, increased the life span of the pipe to a 100-year level of service in addition to mitigating the structural risk posed to the nearby home.

PUBLIC SAFETY

Have fun in the water by being smart and safe

With school letting out and the summer heat cranking up, people naturally flock to the water to stay cool. Enjoy water recreation safely with these tips:

- Never swim alone; be sure there is a lifeguard or another person who is not in the water to watch swimmers
- Always supervise children in the water, staying within arm's reach of a young child
- Young children and inexperienced swimmers should always wear a life jacket in the water
- If in doubt about the depth of the water, always enter feet first; never dive headfirst into shallow water or murky water
- Avoid pool drains; hair, bathing suits, or limbs can get caught in the drain
- Never mix alcohol and swimming, even in shallow water
- Always inspect electrical cords near water for exposed wiring because water conducts electricity

SPLOST

County building two roundabouts this summer

Gwinnett is adding roundabouts to two intersections in the central and eastern part of the county this summer: Constitution Boulevard at Langley Drive near the Gwinnett Justice and Administration Center in Lawrenceville and the crossroads at Lilburn Stone Mountain Road at Old Tucker Road near Lilburn. Both projects include sidewalks, curbs and gutters, and drainage improvements. The $1.2 million roundabout in Lawrenceville and the $1 million roundabout in Lilburn are both funded by SPLOST.

Roundabouts allow traffic to flow continuously and reduce the areas of potential conflict between vehicles. As in all crossings, pedestrians should wait for a gap in traffic and cross with care. When entering a roundabout, traffic will be from your left and has the right of way. Do not proceed until there is adequate room for you to safely enter the flow of traffic.

CHECK IT OUT

Duluth's new library building opens in May

The Gwinnett County Public Library's Duluth branch has relocated to 3180 Main Street in downtown Duluth across from city hall. At about 22,000 square feet, the new building is twice the size of the old library. When it opens this month, it will feature dedicated spaces for children and teens, digital media production, and a makerspace; a meeting room with seating for up to 120 people; and multiple group study rooms.

The city provided 1.9 acres of land along with offsite storm-water detention and streetscaping for the project, while the County added about a half-acre to the site and built and furnished the structure. Revenue from the voter-approved SPLOST funded the County's portion.
