County fills $18 Million Gap in 2011

Gwinnett County's adopted 2011 budget included an $18 million deficit. While that gap represented less than one percent of the total budget, using fund balance to fill the deficit would have been unsustainable. Instead, commissioners and staff worked hard to find revenue enhancements, efficiency improvements, and service reductions where necessary, eliminating the last of the 2011 deficit on March 15, 2011.

The items approved by commissioners during their March 15 meeting will raise the County's 2011 revenue estimate by an additional $1.66 million and establish a new Budget Stabilization Reserve within the general fund that will allow the County to draw up to $3 million from this fund to pay for operations.

It is our goal to share the results of these efforts with the public. Click here to learn how we filled the gap.

Fix-a-Leak Week

National Fix-a-Leak Week is March 14 through 20. Sponsored by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, it is a friendly reminder to homeowners to check for common leaks in toilets, faucets, and underground irrigation systems in the interest of conserving water.

"A slow leak in a toilet can waste 10,000 gallons a year - enough to fill a backyard swimming pool," said Lynn Smarr, Acting Director of Gwinnett County Water Resources. Underground leaks in the water line to the house or a sprinkler system can waste lots of water without the owner's knowledge.

Consider the following tips:

- Put a few drops of food coloring in your toilet tank. If the coloring shows up in the bowl within 10 minutes, the toilet has a flapper-valve leak
- If your family of four is using more than 10,000 - 12,000 gallons a month, you should definitely check for leaks
- All Gwinnett water meters have a small black triangle that spins when even a tiny amount of water is going through the meter, and a spinning triangle when no water is being used means there's a leak somewhere on the homeowner's side of the meter

These simple checks can save some property owners a lot of money on their water bills while helping to conserve one of Georgia's precious resources. Keep in mind that the County also offers a rebate program to encourage replacing pre-1993 toilets that use 3.5 gallons/flush with new WaterSense models that use only 1.28 gallons. If you're looking to dispose of your old porcelain toilet, read the toilet recycling article below.

Homeowners associations, schools, or community groups interested in helping save water can contact Conservation Coordinator Heather Moody by e-mail at dwrconserve@gwinnettcountry.com or by calling 678.376.6722. ## Recycle your old toilets for free!
