5. Presentation on Data Centers by Amy Sharma, Executive Director of Science for Georgia

Amy Sharma PhD is Executive Director of Science for Georgia, a non-profit that bridges the gap between scientists and the public through training, outreach and advocating for the responsible use of science in public policy. Her career spans industry, academia and government—including VP of Product at Prediko (acquired by United Technologies Corp), leadership roles at GTRI, faculty at the University of Western Australia, AAAS Science & Technology Policy Fellowship at the National Science Foundation, and chip designer for IBM. She earned her PhD in Biomedical Engineering from Duke University and enjoys jobs with overly long titles, translating technical ideas for non-scientists, science stand-up comedy, and sewing.
